A sudden whistle, the trees started to wave around crazily! The mountains were howling. Something was out there. The bushes were swaying from side to side with the same rhythm as the wind. Torak's heart was loudly beating. Like every beat was another second on a clock ticking off his life! Tick, tock! His mind was telling him that he doesn't have long to live! Run Torak, go now! The words that his father said just kept running back and forth in Torak's head a million times. Just go Torak, you have all the weapons that you need! Go Torak, you have got this! He ran, leaving a track for the bear to follow!
